Somber occasion this moment in Paris as 70 word leaders mark the centenary of the end of the First World War. Somber because of the memory of the countless who perished and for the lessons left unlearned by generations since.

1918 seems very far away but it was only yesterday. Macron has seen land in France still gray, still ruined. Seen the monuments with French and foreign soldiers who died in France. German and French soldiers' bones side by side in mass graves. Traces of that war have not faded.
